VICTORIA THEATRE.

Stage Manager.... Mr. B. N. JONES.

POSITIVELY LAST WEEK,
owing to prior engagements, of the favourite young Colonial Actor and Author,
Mr. GEORGE DARRELL,
and grand production of his celebrated Local Sensation Drama,
THE TRUMP CARD,

THIS NIGHT, SATURDAY, July 21, will be presented, with new scenery and effects, the great Four Act Local Sensation Domestic Drama, written by GEORGE DARRELL,
author of "Transported for Life," "The Four Fates," "The Struggle for Freedom," "Under the Sun," &c., &c., presented with unqualified success in New York and the principal cities of the United States, and New Zealand, now rewritten and Localised for Sydney, entitled the TRUMP CARD.
RICHARD HEATHCOTE .. Mr. GEO. DARRELL.

The Trump Card, with Song, "Up a Tree," supported by the full strength of the Company and numerous auxiliaries.

The New York, Sydney, and New Zealand critics said of the Drama:—
"Far above all the speciality sensation dramas."—New York Express.
"The best of the modern dramas."—Albany New York Knickerbocker.
"Very much above the average of its class."—New York Dispatch.
"A play of very rare merit."—New York Press.
"A very effective and original drama—well constructed and excellently acted."—New York Telegram.
"The drama proved quite a success, and the actor-author is certainly the peer of anyone of the score of actors who 'star' in similar plays."—New York Spirit of the Times.
"An exceedingly well-written drama, with striking situations and artistically arranged effects."—New York Evening News.
"One of those few plays possessing the merit of being entirely original, enchaining the attention of the audience from first to last."—Daily Tribune, N. Y.
"Smartly put together; the unities are well preserved, and the lights and shades so judiciously intermingled that the interest never flags."—Sydney Herald.
"The plot is a very striking one: the piece is replete with fine situations, that astonish but do not outrage common sense; striking tableaux pervade it from first to last."—Sydney Evening News.
"There is no doubt as great was the success that the piece will run for some nights."—New Zealand Herald.
"The drama is one of the best ever played on an Auckland stage."—Echo, Auckland.
"The most extraordinary play we have ever seen on the stage—the greatest dramatic curiosity of the day."—Auckland Evening Star.
"An unqualified success may fairly be secured to Mr. George Darrell for last night's performance of his well-known drama, 'The Trump Card.'"—Auckland Southern Cross.
"The play was an immense hit, and the author was called and recalled before the curtain after every act. It is no exaggeration to say that never, perhaps, since the theatre has been built has it been filled with such genuine enthusiasm."—Dunedin Guardian.
"The interest never flags, and the climax is not reached until the close of the third act, when the green curtain falls."—Dunedin Star.
"An excellent drama from the pen of Mr. George Darrell. It abounds in exciting situations, and is calculated to sustain the interest of an audience from first to last."—Dunedin Times.

Oxford House.—Entered Outwards, July 20: Sierra Nevada, barque, 695 tons, Captain Koerner, for San Francisco via Newcastle; Tambaroora (s.), 262 tons, Captain Quayle, for Cooktown via Brisbane, Townsville, and Cairns; You Yangs (s.), 457 tons, Captain Ashford, for Melbourne via Newcastle; Peter Tarman, schooner, 80 tons, Captain M'Auley, for New Caledonia; Emu (s.), 131 tons, Captain Phillips, for Solomon Islands; Killarney (s.), 1061 tons, Captain O'Neill, for Shanghai; Wentworth (s.), Captain Edmondson, for Noumea; Noumea, schooner, 147 tons, Captain Scaplehorn, for Noumea.

The Loss of the Yarra Yarra (s.).—At a meeting of the Lifeboat Committee, held at Newcastle on Wednesday night, a description of the loss of the Yarra was given by a boatman in the pilot department named Joseph Minto. He stated that he was on the look-out on the Sunday morning when the Yarra was coming in; about 6.30 saw a steamer coming down with her head to the N.W.; she was not then moving; there was a squall of rain; as it cleared witness took her to be the Yarra; she was while Sparkes gave the signal; there was a heavy smoke, as if she had just had her fire made up; next saw her coming round Nobby's, inside the break water; Sparkes then fired a gun; saw her heading to the east; there was hit her; the first hit her amidships; the second hit on her N.W.; then three seas struck her in succession; saw no way on the vessel afterwards; Mr. Sparkes was standing by the gun at the time; Mr. Dagwell told witness not to fire the gun; her head was then to the eastward; she had a sail, which witness thought to be the tryasl; a steamer properly loaded might have come in with ease; the bar was heavy, but witness could not say it was a signal of distress; did not see the crew anywhere about the vessel; believed now that her flag was a signal of distress; could see better from the hill than from the wharf; was not left alone on the hill save when the man was at his meals; believed, after the vessel went down, that the flag up, from the gaff, was a signal of distress; could not at the time say what the flag positively intended, or what it was; saw no lights on board the vessel; only arrived subsequently at the opinion that the flag was one of distress; the vessel went down about ten minutes after he observed the flag; had been a considerable master for about eighteen months; had no fault to the pilot; held a certificate.

Loss of the Willard G. Patten.—The American schooner, J. W. Connor, master, was totally destroyed by fire on the morning of the 19th July, off Adjarra, in the Straits of Sunda, while on her voyage from Swatow to England with a cargo of sugar. At an inquiry held before the United States Consul at Batavia on the 25th July, it appeared that the vessel was at anchor in the Straits owing to contrary winds and currents, and at 10 p.m. on the 18th a fire broke out in the forehold. Every means was used to extinguish it, but without success. The master signalled for assistance from the shore but none was given, though the English ship Carolus Magnus sent some help. The fire making great progress, and spreading fore and aft, the crew were compelled at 11 o'clock to take to the boats. The master left the vessel all night. Next morning she was still a mass of flames, and it was found impossible to save anything, though Captain Connor visited the burning ship to see if he could do so. At midnight the ship foundered. The Court found that there was no evidence to show how the fire originated. The evidence, however, proceeds the verdict, "tended to show that the cook took a light down into the forehold between 6 and half-past 8 p.m. to aid him in obtaining coals for galley use, and there is no evidence to show that he brought this light on deck again. This opinion is confirmed by the sudden disappearance of the cook immediately previous to the holding of the Court and the failure of attempts on the part of the Consul to apprehend him, notwithstanding the offer of a reward for his apprehension." The Court exonerated the master from all blame in the matter, and declared that captain, officers, and crew used every exertion to overcome the fire. The Willard G. Patten was insured for £4000, which is distributed among offices doing business in this colony.

The Louisa, which left this port on Thursday, for Wollongong, returned yesterday, owing to the southerly weather.

The barques Queen Emma and Vivid report light weather, but very thick for the greater portion of the passage.

In consequence of a defect having been discovered in the crank shaft of the Coonambara (s.) she did not leave last night for the Hunter. The manager of the A. S. N. Company, however, decided on sending back the Collaroy (s.), so that the public should not be put to any inconvenience. The Coonambara was taken over to the Pyrmont Works yesterday afternoon, and the Collaroy left at 11 p.m.

Accident on Board the Wotonga.—An accident happened on board the Wotonga (s.) on Tuesday, whereby a seaman named Charles Fennant, aged thirty-four years, was seriously injured. Fennant was employed at some work in the hold of the vessel, when a bar of pig iron slipped from a sling and fell upon his back. He was conveyed to the Melbourne Hospital, and it was found that he had received severe injury to his spine.

The Woodbine, from Lyttelton, sailed on the 9th instant, and has put into port for orders. She reports moderate weather as prevailing the greater part of the passage.

The Tambaroora (s.) left Brisbane at 12.40 p.m. on the 17th instant, cleared Cape Moreton at 5.40 p.m.; at 11 p.m. on the 18th passed Smoky Cape; at 10.20 a.m. on the 19th passed Seal Rocks, and arrived at the wharf in Sydney at 1.30 a.m. on the 20th. Experienced light westerly winds and clear weather to Smoky Cape, from thence fresh westerly winds and clear weather to port.

The American emigrant ship Annie H. Smith has received pratique, and was towed into the harbour and anchored in Farm Cove yesterday morning.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

SATURDAY, JULY 21, 1877.

In the Legislative Assembly, yesterday.

Several questions were asked, the replies to which will be found in the report-in-chief.

Sir Henry Parkes laid upon the table—1. Return to an order made on 19th June, 1877, in reference to the dismissal of Stephen Murphy, late warder in Berrima gaol. 2. Return, in part, to an order made on 25th April, 1877, in reference to disputed cases as to the issue of Volunteer land orders. 3. Return showing increase and decrease in numbers of electors on electoral rolls for 1859-60, and from 1873-4 to 1876-7. 4. Return showing the estimated number of electors entitled to vote in the several gold-fields, electoral districts for 1877-8. Ordered to be printed.

In Committee of the Whole, Mr. Sutherland moved that an address be presented to the Governor, praying that his Excellency will be pleased to cause provision to be made on the Further Additional Estimate for 1877, for payment to the municipal bodies of the colony, including the Corporation of the City of Sydney, of a sum, equal to the amount received by such bodies for the year 1876, excepting all sums that may have been paid to them as endowment from the Consolidated Revenue of the colony. Every member of the House was aware of the necessity which existed for giving further assistance to the municipalities of the colony. It was desirable to encourage these institutions in every legitimate way.

Sir Henry Parkes said that the Government would not oppose the motion if the mover would consent to an amendment, to include the Corporation of the city of Sydney, the affairs of which would be dealt with in a complete manner in a bill which the Government intended to introduce in the course of a few days.

The amendment was opposed by Mr. Stuart, Mr. Davies, Mr. Garrett, Mr. Forster, Mr. M'Elhone, Mr. Macintosh, Mr. Charles, Mr. Dibbs, and Mr. Wisdom, and supported by Captain Onslow, and Mr. S. C. Brown.

A very lengthy discussion ensued, and it was contended by those who opposed the amendment that it would be unfair to exclude the City Corporation from the benefits of the motion. On the other hand, it was argued that it would be better to allow the Government to deal with the affairs of the city as a whole.

During the discussion several points of order arose, and the debate at times was somewhat acrimonious.

Towards the close of the debate Sir Henry Parkes intimated that if the amendment was negatived he would accept it as a vote of censure. He was not in love with office without having the power attached to it. Nothing but the state of the country would have induced him to put up with so many rebuffs as the Government had already received, and he was prepared to take the consequence of the amendment being negatived. If the motion had been submitted upon its merits there would not have been ten votes in favour of it. The support it received was mainly given with a view of embarrassing the Government. He charged the Opposition with wilfully obstructing the Government for the purpose of preventing the passing of the Electoral Bill, for the introduction of which they had been so clamorous. The time had come when things must be brought to an issue, one way or the other. Whatever might be the result of the appeal to the people, which must take place before long, he would accept the verdict of the country without disappointment or complaint.

Sir John Robertson characterized the speech of Sir Henry Parkes as a despicable attempt to lead the House from the question at issue. He had made a whining appeal to hon. members to keep him in office a little longer. As to Sir Henry Parkes's abuse of hon. members on the Opposition side of the House, that hon. gentleman had dealt in the same way by every one of those with whom he was now associated.

After further discussion, Mr. Terry moved that the Chairman leave the chair, report progress, and ask leave to sit again on Friday next. It was desirable to have Mr. Garrett's motion with respect to the 31st clause of the Lands Acts Amendment Act dealt with before any political crisis occurred.

Several hon. members having addressed the committee at considerable length, the motion to report progress was carried.

The report from the Committee of the Whole on the Real Property Act Amendment Bill was adopted.

The House, at sixteen minutes past 11 o'clock, adjourned to 4 p.m. on Tuesday next.

By a very narrow majority the Assembly has decided to drop the grant to the Foundling Hospital. It is undesirable, for many reasons, that we should get into the habit of subsidising struggling institutions one year and leave them to their own resources another; but many of the arguments against the proposed grant were exceedingly forcible, and if inquiry were made, it would probably be found that the voice of the majority of the Assembly in this instance represents that of a majority of the people outside.

The cause of the Foundling Hospital is one of charity, and we are accustomed to point to the charities of our time as being among its foremost distinctions. That they really are such very few will dispute, but the importance which the age has assigned to the charitable principles renders it all the more necessary that institutions professing to embody such principles should be carefully scrutinised and wisely managed. Although the nineteenth century has produced a large number of benevolent revolutions, there is not much danger of its being overstocked with charities. The most dangerous tendencies of mankind are usually in a wholly different direction. There is, however, a good deal of danger of our getting wrong charities instead of right ones, or of getting right ones governed on wrong principles, and by wrong hands.

Every charity ought to act as a deterrent, and not as a stimulus. It has been found that the growing danger in connection with many of our modern systems of benevolence is that in supplying the charities we feed the evil which ought to be checked. The evil of espousing all charities that come in our way is only matched by the still greater one of espousing none. The world wants benevolent impulses as much as it ever did; but it also wants the practical sense by which such impulses may be turned into the right channel, and to the best account. Carlyle has intimated that Marie Antoinette delighted to succour the poor, but such poor as came picturesquely in her way. In the same manner the world often gets the semblance of charity without the reality, or the reality without the discrimination that guards it against abuse. Thus popular charities, as well as doing permanent good, often do irreparable harm. The task of pointing this out is not a particularly welcome one, but the most unwelcome of tasks are often the most necessary. The charities of the age stand quite as much in need of the wisdom of the statesman as of the disinterestedness of the philanthropist, and if this is true of charities generally, it is specially true of those of the class which came under discussion in the Assembly on Wednesday evening.

We should be sorry to damp the zeal of those who started and have hitherto supported the Foundling Hospital of this city; much less do we wish to endorse the sentiments of those who attempt to make such zeal an object of ridicule. There is no reason for doubting that the aim of the promoters of the Foundling Hospital has been the saving of life, or that the end has been answered. In civilized lands the life of an infant has generally been held to be as sacred as that of a man. The helplessness of the former is even more truly an object of human pity than that of the latter. Further, the claims of children on the sympathy of the world are increased rather than lessened by the unnaturalness of parents. The brutalities of parentage are no sufficient argument for the withdrawing of help from infancy and childhood. If the public were to distribute its charities to none but those who deserve them, it would have much less to do in this way than it has had hitherto. It is possible that many whose claims on the bounty of the State are never questioned have reached our hospitals or asylums through courses which are as far from correct as those which bring the infant of the foundling hospital to the door-step or the dung-heap.

The first recommendation of any charity is that it is a necessity, but the second is that it is nothing more than a necessity. We have no doubt that there is a real necessity either for a foundling hospital or for something that answers the purpose of one. But, while this is true, the danger elsewhere has been that of carrying such establishments beyond the limits of necessity, and of making them feeders of the evils they are intended to discountenance. In older countries it has been shown over and over again that one of the principal effects of the unnecessary increase of different kinds of relief is an increase of demoralization. Professor Fawcett has pointed out that indiscriminate aid to dependent and vicious classes is the surest encouragement to improvidence and vice. On the continent of Europe, one effect of the multiplication of foundling hospitals has been the saving of life; but another has been an enormous increase in the number of lives to be saved in this way, or not at all. Thus, while such hospitals have helped to put a stop to one public evil, they have helped to carry another on.

Whether foundling hospitals can be so managed as to check infanticide without promoting the growth of evils of much greater magnitude is a point that may not be very easily settled. But if such institutions are to accomplish the maximum of good with the minimum of evil, the further they are kept from Parliament the better. Parliament has already more of such institutions on its hands than it can well manage, and the experience the colony has hitherto had of endowed charities does not by any means suggest the wisdom of unduly multiplying them. History has shown that unnecessary or mistaken charity on the part of the Legislature is usually productive of far more serious consequences than similar charities elsewhere. The sentiment which the Poor-law system has fostered in England is that, whatever the wants and woes of the dependent classes may be, the State is bound to supply or to relieve them. The colonies have happily not yet accustomed themselves to such a liberal interpretation of the doctrine of Parliamentary benevolence; but even here the State has more dependent children to bring up than it ought to have, and if the requisite facilities are afforded, it will soon have a much larger number than it has now.

If larger State provision is wanted for the care of infants that may be thrown upon the pity of the world, it is far better that such provision should be made in connection with institutions already in existence than that we should needlessly make new ones. Even though the cost per head in this way may be larger, the cost as a whole will be much smaller. If more is wanted than the State can supply, it is better that the margin should be filled up by society without, such partnership as parliamentary grants imply than with it. Institutions that belong partly to society and partly to Government are seldom well supported or well managed. In some instances this divided interest is unavoidable; but where charities can be managed without the Government, it is better for all parties that they should be so managed. There is no existing necessity for any Foundling Hospital that might not be managed and supported by the liberality of the public; and if not, why should the aid and the interference of Parliament be sought? It ought not to follow that because a reformatory movement is a good or a necessary thing the Government should take it up. Where institutions divide public opinion, as Foundling Hospitals must always do, it is better that Government should leave them alone; and, until our wants are more serious than they are believed to be at present, a decision to this effect ought not to interfere either with the relief of social suffering or with the success of private liberality.

The best part of Mr. Farnell's speech in the ironclad debate of Thursday night, was his financial argument against unduly increasing the burdens of the country. In regard to the particular question under discussion, the weakness of the argument was in its application; for, if self-preservation be a primary law both of nature and of civil society, the necessary cost of it must be borne by the public, and will be a far less burden than the penalty of neglecting one of the first functions of government. But, apart from its connection with the ironclad, Mr. Farnell's plea for economy is well worth the attention of honorable members. The Estimates for the year, as now submitted, will bring up the total expenditure to very nearly five and a half millions sterling, and that is larger by two hundred thousand pounds than the estimated income. At the most, the proceeds of taxation will not exceed a million and a quarter, and on account of all the services there is a loss. There is nothing else to fall back upon but the territorial revenue, and that may fail us any day, and must fail ere long. If the sales continue for the rest of the year as large as for the last half, the entire land revenue for the year will fall very little below three and a half millions, and in that case there will still be a surplus for the year and not a deficit. But Mr. Stuart himself, when preparing his estimates, dared not reckon upon the continuance of the demand for land at the rate prevailing last year. The climax has not been reached as soon as he expected, but for all that our financiers ought to prepare for it by preserving a balance between expenditure and income without relying so dangerously upon a precarious and temporary source. For a country of three hundred thousand square miles, and a population of a little over six hundred thousand, the cost of government is sure to be comparatively high under the most economical management. There could be no better investment of public money than in spending a fair proportion in some well-managed scheme of colonization. And yet there are members in the House who pretend that a hundred thousand pounds is too much for such a purpose, but who have no scruple about voting away three and a half millions a year from the public estate, not a penny of which ought to be used for meeting ordinary current expenditure. As against the ironclad Mr. Farnell's warning may have little weight, if in the opinion of those best qualified to judge that plan of defence is the best, because the costliest thing the colony can do is to remain defenceless. But there are a thousand ways in which the warning may legitimately take effect; if not in regard to the present Estimates which have almost passed, at least in the preparation of those to be dealt with by the next Parliament.

The Overloading of Colliers.—We have received two letters on this subject. One correspondent signing himself an "Old Skipper" says,—"There is quite as much overloading here as in England. Owners here, as well as in England, like big freights and will overload their vessels here for the sake of profit, as much as English owners. As an old shipmaster, I have seen hundreds of cases of overloading in these colonies, not only by colliers, but vessels in the intercolonial trade, loaded to the scuppers, bound to Melbourne and other ports in Bass's Straits—this, too in the winter season, and without a sail to bend in case of one being blown away, and with scarcely a yard of canvas to repair them if required." He relates instances of overloading, one of which we give as of recent date—"About ten days ago, a steam collier was anchored off the Grafton Wharf, with her covering board in the water for at least 50 feet, and a deck load

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

FRIDAY, JULY 20.

THE SPEAKER took the chair at twenty-nine minutes past 4 o'clock.

QUESTIONS.

Mr. F. B. SUTTOR, in reply to Mr. Abbott, said the Public school at Brodie's Plains, near Inverell, would be commenced when the proposed site had been vested in the Council. Delay had been caused by the fact that the deeds of the donor of the site had not been issued by the Lands or Works Office, and the transfer therefore could not be made until it was.

Mr. HOSKINS, in reply to Mr. Lackey, said Mr. Watkin's tender was accepted for the contract for that of a railway from Orange to Dubbo, and he would be prepared to show the hon. gentleman the schedule of prices thereof at the Public Works Office. The work would be commenced without delay. There was no impediment in the way of doing so that he was aware of.

Mr. F. B. SUTTOR, in reply to Mr. Baker's question, said papers relative to the Adelong Common would be laid on the table of the House next week.

Mr. F. B. SUTTOR, in reply to Mr. Cameron's question, said the establishment of technical schools throughout the colony would be proceeded with as soon as possible.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to Mr. Cameron's question, said the return asked for relative to immigration from the United Kingdom, Europe, and America would be given in time for the session of 1878. A return relative to Immigration was obtained from the Agent-general in London on the subject.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to Mr. Forster, said a map delineating the railways of the colony should be prepared for exhibition in the waiting-room of the Assembly, and, if possible, maps showing the railways of other colonies should be obtained for the same purpose.

PAPERS.

Sir HENRY PARKES laid on the table of the House papers relating to the dismissal of Stephen Murphy, lately a warder at Berrima gaol; papers relating to disputed cases for Volunteer land orders; and papers relative to the number of electors in each electorate and electoral rolls relating to the gold-fields electorates—all of which were ordered to be printed.

ENDOWMENT TO MUNICIPALITIES.

The Speaker left the chair, and the House having resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, Mr. SUTHERLAND moved,—That in address be presented to the Governor, praying that his Excellency would be pleased to cause provision to be made on a Further Additional Estimate for the ensuing year for payment to all the municipal bodies of the colony, under the Corporation of the City of Sydney, of a sum equal to the amount received by such bodies for the year 1876, excepting all sums that may have been paid to them as endowment from the Consolidated Revenue of the colony." He did not think that any explanation on his part was much in request of the motion, for he felt that every hon. member was well aware of the necessity for doing something for the municipalities of the country. The matter had taken up his attention for some years past, for he had unfortunately had been doing a great deal to injure the desire for municipal government, and to cause a great many people under that government to have feel more of distaste for it, because the roads outside the municipalities were better attended to, and had a larger amount of money spent on them than was given to the municipal districts for roads, or than they could afford to spend on roads within their boundaries. It should be the interest of the House to try to create a feeling in favour of self-government, but it appeared that for years past they had been doing exactly the contrary, and they were going to find that the resolution on the paper. He wished to try to get justice, or a portion of it done to the municipalities. It was not a question affecting the Government or any party in the House, but it extended over every electorate—or it ought to—and he did not expect there would be any opposition to the resolution as he was not going to ask for more than the amount must be placed upon the Estimates and come before the House again, when the House would have another opportunity for dealing with it. Even if the motion were passed, they would be doing very little for the municipalities in accordance with their desert. He was not going to ask for more than the sum they already received, and did so because the amount could be easily ascertained from their books; and he hoped Parliament would give them a shilling for every shilling, or a pound for every pound they raised. It had been his wish to get the whole of the colony under self-government, and thus get rid of a great deal of the evil that now prevailed. If they gave £10 or £20 a mile for roads outside municipalities, while the municipalities were unable to spend £5 or £10 a mile on roads within their districts, and such a state of things created dissatisfaction in them, because they felt they were not able to do what the Government were doing for the rest of the country; and they were large ratepayers of the country, paying a portion of this £15, £20, or £50 a mile for the roads coming right up to their boundary. A great number of the municipalities had been receiving nothing from the Government for the last three or four years, and he thought the House would do very little indeed if they gave them a sum for that period equal to what they received last year. The whole of it would not amount to anything like the sum passed the other night for the road vote.

Sir HENRY PARKES said the Government would not oppose the resolution if the hon. member would consent to exempt the city of Sydney from it. He questioned whether a portion of the endowment could be properly and much better applied than to this purpose, and now that the House had decided to appropriate very large sums of money indeed to those parts of the country not incorporated, it became a question of simple justice that the parts which were incorporated should have some portion of the public money. But the Government had not the means in course of preparation, and would introduce in a few days, a bill which would deal completely with the affairs of the city, taking them up as they now stood. It would then be useless and imprudent to commit to the city of Sydney being indebted to this resolution, and he proposed to omit from the resolution the word "including," and insert the words "other than," so as to exclude the city of Sydney.

Mr. SUTHERLAND said, of course he had no knowledge of what was being done by the Government for the city of Sydney; he only knew there was a great necessity for doing something for the municipalities, and he thought this resolution was only a fair way of doing a little for them; but if the Government and the members for Sydney were satisfied with the proposed amendment, he would throw no obstructions in the way. He would like the Colonial Secretary to consider, as he thought it would be better to allow this resolution to go, and strike that amendment out, than to take it out of the estimate when it came before the House. If the bill were not likely to pass this session, it would be doing an injustice to the city of Sydney to leave it out of this financial gift, as he might call it, to the whole of the municipalities in the country.

Sir HENRY PARKES said the bill would be introduced next Wednesday, and this bill, after a most careful examination, would deal with the affairs of the city as they stood at the present moment, taking into account the whole case. In passing a resolution of this kind it was proposed to give a larger sum to the city of Sydney than to all the other municipalities put together. He could not consent to the proposition of giving pound for pound, they would give to the city of Sydney for one year more than to all the other municipalities; and that would be given notwithstanding that the Government were prepared to meet the case for the city by submitting a bill dealing with the case conclusively. If such a resolution as the one before were carried, paying to the city of Sydney the sum of £7,000 for one year, he would alter the bill he proposed to introduce, and not give the city all the endowment he proposed to give it in that bill.

Mr. STUART said it was his intention to vote for the resolution, and he hoped the hon. member who moved it would not consent to the amendment as proposed by the Colonial Secretary. He could not help drawing attention to the most extraordinary position into which this House was rapidly drifting. (Opposition cheers.) Surely hon. members would acknowledge that it was the bounden duty of the Government of the country to manage the financial affairs. But here we had one member one day rising and proposing the abolition of revenue, first for one amount and then for another, and then we had other members doing at the same time voting and proposing to vote away other sums of money that had never been contemplated by the Government in their forecast of the expenditure of the year. It was only a very short time since the Treasurer came here with his statement of the estimated revenue and expenditure for the year, and already very large inroads had been made but the sources of revenue—inroads which the Government had not resisted, and which, in his view, they had assisted in bringing about. (Hear, hear.) He should have thought that a motion of this kind, however just it was, should have been brought down by the Government. Hon. members would bear in mind that this sum asked for amounted to £160,000 or £170,000.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: Nothing of the kind.

Mr. HOSKINS: £90,000.

Mr. STUART said the hon. member showed his utter ignorance of the matter.

Mr. WISDOM: At least £100,000.

Mr. STUART said the amount was £170,000, because the resolution said "a sum equal to the amount received by such bodies for the year 1876, excepting all sums that may have been paid to them as endowment." The sums received by bodies for 1876 amounted to something like £70,000.

[Sir HENRY PARKES: £67,000.] Taking the year 1876, the city rate was £37,600; water and street rate, £9000; fees, £2000; rents and dues from markets, £7000; wharfs, £2000; various other items about £2000: total amount, including endowment of £10,000, £67,600. [Sir HENRY PARKES: That is what I say.] The resolution said, "a sum equal to the amount received by such bodies for the year 1876." He found that in addition to this £37,000, £30,000 was received by the city from the water and sewerage funds. The total sum that this resolution involved might therefore be assessed at £160,000. Considering the large amounts of money which we had spent for one purpose, he thought it was only just to vote this money, but, so long as we had the appearance of a Government at all, surely it was the place of the Government to make the proposal. It seemed to him that the Colonial Treasurer would need to recast his statement altogether, for he had drifted away from it entirely, and however right it might be to entrust the municipalities with the expenditure of this large sum of money, the committee had not before it a sufficient knowledge of the state of the finances of the country to say whether it would be justified in agreeing to the proposal. The Colonial Treasurer ought to state what would be the effect upon his estimated surplus of the large sums of money which we had been voting away, and the sources of revenue which we had been abandoning. As to the amendment moved by the Colonial Secretary, it no doubt would have a great effect in reducing the amount, but it would not increase the justice in the same proportion. (Hear, hear.) If it was just to endow the municipalities outside Sydney, it would be most unjust to leave Sydney unprovided for. The House had not yet seen the bill which the Government intended to introduce, but no doubt it would be a bill for permanently benefiting the city. This, however, was a gift of an amount equal to one year's taxes, to be given to every municipality, and on no principle of fairness ought Sydney to be passed by. We had no guarantee that the bill which the Government intended to introduce would pass.

Mr. WISDOM: Hear, hear; it will not pass this session. This House will not be in existence in a month's time.

Mr. STUART: If the hon. member at the head of the Government had already anticipated in his bill the proposal of the hon. member for Paddington, the proposal could afterwards be omitted from the resolution. He thought the amendment ought not to be agreed to.

Mr. DAVIES intended to support the resolution as it was proposed, and he hoped the hon. member at the head of the Government would withdraw his amendment. If a bill were passed now it would not afford relief for twelve months at least, while that proposed was immediate. He could not understand upon what principle of fairness the city of Sydney was to be refused the assistance given to country municipalities, when it had to maintain a hundred miles of streets, principally main thoroughfares, over which nearly the whole of the traffic of the country passed. The Government said they were going to bring in a bill to deal with the whole question of the city affairs. They had not seen the bill, and they did not know what might happen. The Government might get into a difficulty, and the bill might never be produced. A bird in the hand was worth two in the bush. He hoped the Colonial Secretary would not persist in his amendment. This resolution would give immediate relief. He hoped hon. gentlemen were disposed to give fair play to Sydney.

Captain ONSLOW hoped the House would consider what they were about before they voted for either the resolution or the amendment. The amendment was preferable to the resolution. It seemed to him that they were drifting into a state of chaotic confusion, and that the Government had no authority. (Cheers.) While the municipalities got relief in an indiscriminate way, they would never have good municipal government. As long as the Sydney Corporation could get money in this way, there would be no good system. He thought the proposition of the Colonial Secretary was the fairer of the two, especially with regard to the city of Sydney. He did not mean to say that a portion of the surplus could not be well laid out; but any one who was acquainted with the country could not but be aware that a large proportion of it would be improperly expended under the present system. They had no proper system for the expenditure of large sums of money. He should vote against the resolution and amendment.

Mr. GARRETT hoped the hon. gentleman who had introduced the resolution would not consent to receive the amendment. He had been in Parliament for sixteen or seventeen years, and he could not remember a period when it was more proposed to bring in a Municipal Bill. On many occasions everything was favourable to the introduction of the bill; but on the present occasion he could see little that was favourable to the carrying of a bill, for, we were not only at the fag-end of the session, but also at the fag-end of the Parliament. [Sir JOHN ROBERTSON: And the fag-end of the Government.] (Laughter.) And the Government were in this position, that they could not guarantee to pass anything they proposed. The hon. member for Paddington was asked to give up his resolution; and because he, feeling a deep interest on the subject, also spoke to the hon. member, was he to be insulted by being charged with attempting to earwig the hon. member? He was the last man in the world to attempt to do anything of the kind. He thought the hon. member ought to accept the amendment proposed by the Premier. The bill of the Government would be brought in on Tuesday, and if hon. members found that it did not come up to what they wished, they could put a resolution on the paper and have the matter considered either in ten days or a fortnight. [Mr. WISDOM: What harm in voting now?] We had the Premier's ars ance that his bill would deal with the finances of the Corporation in a way that would be satisfactory, but it was said that there was no certainty that this bill would be carried—that the Government were so weak that they could not carry the bill. (Hear, hear.) The consequence must be that there would be a dissolution; and if there was a dissolution, what became of the Appropriation Act? [Mr. WISDOM: Can the hon. member state on authority that there will be a dissolution?] He stated that simply as his opinion on the course of events. It was said that a bird in hand was worth two in the bush; but this money could not be paid until the Appropriation Act was passed, and hon. members opposite said that no Appropriation Act should be passed. [Sir JOHN ROBERTSON: No. Opposition cries of "Who says so?"—and Mr. WISDOM: "Unless the Electoral Bill was placed on the table."] He had heard it said repeatedly since that bill had been laid on the table. There was more likelihood of an amended Corporation Bill being passed than of an Appropriation Act. Sir ROBERTSON: Oh, oh! The municipalities and the Corporation of Sydney did not stand on the same footing. Most of the municipalities started with a revenue insufficient for their requirements, but the Corporation of Sydney had always had a revenue of £400,000 and upwards. He admitted that the Corporation had not been sufficiently enslaved, but they had received grants amounting to about £70,000. If the Corporation had been as careful of their funds as other municipalities, their affairs could not have reached their present condition. They had spent £60,000 upon the Town Hall, and proposed to spend other £40,000 to complete it. Was that the position of other municipalities? [Mr. STUART: Yes, in proportion to their revenue.] He thought not. Most of them were as well governed as any municipalities you could wish to see in any country. He regretted that the mover had not submitted his proposal in the form of two distinct resolutions, so that the municipalities might take a separate vote. On the Sofala road there was the main street of Goulburn paid for by the Government, and the same took place at Yass. In the north there was a road at Newcastle from the wharf, besides which there was the main Northern Road passing from Newcastle through East and West Maitland, and on through Singleton, Muswellbrook, Jerry's Plains, and Armidale, and onwards, every inch of which was made and kept up by the Government. At Dumbiquin there was a toll tax from which thousands of pounds were got in, spent on the four miles each side of that structure. At Penrith, also, the tolls were expended on the road, east and west of the bridge there. He did not see in regard to Sydney that Nothing of the kind. The Government, as soon as the great Southern Road came to it, did not expend a penny on it. George-street required £11,000 a year to keep it in repair, and they also knew that the great products of the north passed along many of the streets of the city—especially Russell-street—to the Circular Quay, at which the Government had not contributed a shilling. Then, again, take the Paterson district—that was not incorporated—there was a bridge there, representing an expenditure equal to £4 or £5 per head of the population; while at Williams River there was a bridge representing an expenditure equal to £3 per head. (No, no.) [Mr. WISDOM: That's a d—r wonder. (Laughter.)] The Bathurst bridge, on the Great Western Road, was different. Too Government, in his opinion, or any Legislature, would do no good in the matter until they discarded municipal duties and gave the municipalities themselves power to levy rates for roads. To the present House was not a Parliament at all, as was simply a convention, and, and as famous for squabbling as any other council in the colony. It certainly had done nothing in the shape of legislation during the last three years, since it was called to municipal matters it ought to have nothing to do with. The hon. member ought to have proper laws allowing different localities to perform local duties, and to be supported by the fact that members voting money away had no personal knowledge of what it was intended for. When it was seen that money was voted away like that, it created a desire on the part of every member to have their districts benefited, and that the House was taken up with municipal matters altogether. Sydney was unable to look to the Government for assistance in regard to water supply and sewerage. (Attention was called to the state of the House, and a quorum formed.) He was surprised that the Government did not remain in the House. He certainly did not try to make a party question. He only wished that justice should be done to Sydney, and the other municipalities. He thought the municipalities deserved to have the money dealt out to them as proposed, for they had proved themselves quite able to discharge their duties properly—that was, of course, as far as their funds allowed. No municipal council could carry on their duties in a satisfactory manner unless they were allowed to levy a rate for the purpose. He had visited many of them and found such to be the case; there was an actual necessity for the money mentioned in the resolutions being voted, and it was simply as a matter of necessity that he would vote for it. Take Sydney, for instance. Did any municipality in the country require more than the city of Sydney? It was asked to visit it with any degree of confidence—as they could be invited to Melbourne—for its thoroughfares, especially the minor ones, that gave a character to the city—were in a very bad state of repair for the want of funds to procure metal to repair them. They had, however, no power to raise money for the purpose, and the consequence was that the back streets had become a perfect disgrace to any city. Such a state of things ought to disappear he knew, but, notwithstanding the economical course pursued by the City Council, they still existed. The Council, besides, had no place for the deposit of accumulated matter, which went down to the sea. How could they keep up their heads when the rulers of the country would not give them their proper power. They only wanted justice, and even that was denied them. He believed the House generally would give it them, but he feared the Premier would be deterred from doing so notwithstanding the desires of his heart otherwise—as he was deterred sixteen years ago, when he wished to place Sydney in a most enviable position. The Municipal Bill only consolidated the present Acts; the nature of the endowment clauses was a secret. He did not think that they should be known to any one until the bill was brought to the table of this House. But the bill would require to be one of 200 or 300 clauses, and the Parliament along municipal duties there was no expectation that a bill would be passed. Now then was their time to place the city upon the same footing as the other municipalities. [Attention was called to the state of the committee, and a quorum was formed.]

He would trust the Government with justice, and he hoped they would do justice to the city of Sydney. Every opportunity had been taken to disparage the metropolis, while the interior of the country had been benefited. The Corporation of Sydney was started on a basis found to be perfectly inadequate. The experiment was made on a wrong principle, and this was shown seventeen years ago. [Attention was called to the state of the committee, and a quorum was formed.]

Mr. CHARLES was of opinion that if the Government had taken up the Municipalities Bill when they came into power, the hon. member for Paddington would never have thought of bringing forward this resolution. He would feel very great pleasure indeed in supporting the resolution.

Mr. SUTHERLAND said he would have no objection to the amendment of the Colonial Secretary if he thought there was any probability of a bill being passed this year to assist the city of Sydney. The resolutions, however, were not his now; they were the property of the committee. He was sorry that so much feeling had been imported into the discussion, and for which the hon. member for East Sydney (Mr. Stuart) was mainly responsible. As to the largeness of the amount, which that hon. member dwelt on, he had learned from the Town Clerk that the revenue of the city, instead of being what the hon. member estimated, was £44,000. He could not accede to the amendment, but he was willing to postpone the resolutions until after the bill had been introduced if the Government would allow it to be taken on a Government night.

Mr. DIBBS hoped the Government would not give up a Government night for this resolution. He intended to vote against both the resolution and the amendment, because he thought it was an extremely bad principle to allow hon. members to interfere with the finances by means of motions of this kind. He thought such inroads upon Governments should be resisted to the death. He warned the House against this practice, which had now become common, and the example for which was set by the late Government. The Government were following the bad example of their predecessors in yielding to a demand for a large expenditure of money that must disturb the financial arrangements of the country. Here they were at the end of a session, after the budget had been delivered, asked to vote an amount almost equal to the amount derivable in one year from the stamp duties. [Mr. JACOB: The Government consented.] He did not care. He condemned hon. members coming down and usurping the functions of the Government. No hon. member could justify the proposal to vote £122,000 at the tail-end of a session, to put the Government into a corner. And this vote was proposed on the very eve of a bill passing into law which would give the municipalities power to borrow large sums of money direct from the Government. The proposal to give such grants as these to the municipalities was most unreasonable, and he should vote against both the motion and the amendment.

Mr. WISDOM said if the Government were opposed to this proposition as a whole, why did they not vote against it; but he could not understand how they could make this grant to country municipalities, and refuse the same in justice to Sydney. All these country municipalities had since their foundation received an endowment from the Government, beginning with one half and getting less after a certain number of years, whereas Sydney had never received a single shilling of the Government endowment. In April, 1875, it was stated by a Minister in reply to a question that if the Corporation of Sydney had been paid rates for all the Government buildings in the city since its establishment, they would have received £183,110. And that amount they were entitled to receive from the Government for rates upon property which were kept up not for the City of Sydney, but for the colony generally. And that was irrespective of an endowment. If Sydney had received a sum by way of endowment, such as had been received by the country municipalities what an amount would that have been! But they were told that Sydney had no right to endowment because the Corporation had had a loan or a gift of £40,000 or £50,000. But admitting that there had been a gift of that amount, what was that to be set against the £183,000, which the Corporation were entitled to for rates upon Government property, and the amount they would have received in addition to an endowment equal to what was given to the country municipalities? If the representatives of Sydney had seen that justice was done to it, instead of being in its present position it would have had an ample revenue. (Cheers. He had never acted from a narrow-minded policy with regard to Sydney. He had voted for every expenditure for Sydney that he thought was fair, and in justice to the various Governments he must say that he had scarcely known a vote proposed that was not a fair vote. Did they find this narrow-minded policy pursued with regard to country expenditure by city representatives? Certainly not. They found city members in the Supreme Court in justice to the claims of country. And yet they had country members setting up their backs and refusing to do justice to Sydney. The Colonial Secretary did not attempt during the last session to let the House know what they were put out by the scruff of the neck. What had been done during the night? They had not been attending in their places, but they had been passing away money. Country hon. members—he did not know with what effect—trying to induce one to go away to his farm, and another to his merchandise; and they knew that if the Government were beaten, there would be either a dissolution or resignation—as if hon. members were afraid of that. He was not afraid of dissolution, for if he never came back, he should not regret it so long as he left behind him the knowledge that as long as Tory on that side of the House had not fear a dissolution; they had not voted against going to the country. Let the gilded lads beautify themselves and swagger in the lobby as they had done now. The hon. member for Morpeth entirely forgot the position which he and we occupied, when he charged us with get no into a state of excitement and trembling by the hon. gentleman opposite—the facts were that he was the only Minister who spoke, and he then only uttered a few dispassionate words to the committee. There had not been a single passage that indicated any feeling at all, or that he did wish to say anything except to the committee the position in which we found ourselves. That showed how the hon. gentleman's understanding was completely clouded by the feelings into which he had worked himself when he saw an opportunity of embarrassing the Government. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) He could not help taking notice of the hon. gentleman, although it was painful to do so, after his most personal assertions—not personal exactly because of his being an aspirant for a high judicial office. (Expressions of dissent from Mr. Burns.) He was not surprised that the hon. gentleman did not accept office as the colleague of the late Postmaster-General. (Loud dissent and cheers.) He was alluding to the fact that the hon. gentleman was an aspirant for the Speaker's chair, and they naturally kept their eyes upon him. What was right, should be the supporting of his own Government, which was their business, and of his own industries. The hon. member had not failed to seize every opportunity to cause confusion to the person who had had the presumption to step into the positions he and his colleagues had occupied for the last five years. He made it a personal charge that the Treasurer was not in his place to-night, and the hon. member forgot that the late Government, which he supported, knew the value of the services of Mr. Garrett, and were incapable of governing the country. (Cheers.) Time after time motions had been brought in by private members interfering with the finances through East and West Maitland, and on the Singleton, Muswellbrook, Jerry's Plains, and Armidale, and onwards, every inch of which was made and kept up by the Government. At Dumbiquin there was a toll tax from which thousands of pounds were got in, spent on the four miles each side of that structure. Now then was their time to place the city upon the same footing as the other municipalities. [Attention was called to the state of the committee, and a quorum was formed.]

He would trust the Government with justice, and he hoped they would do justice to the city of Sydney. Every opportunity had been taken to disparage the metropolis, while the interior of the country had been benefited. The Corporation of Sydney was started on a basis found to be perfectly inadequate. The experiment was made on a wrong principle, and this was shown seventeen years ago. [Attention was called to the state of the committee, and a quorum was formed.]

Mr. CHARLES was of opinion that if the Government had taken up the Municipalities Bill when they came into power, the hon. member for Paddington would never have thought of bringing forward this resolution. He would feel very great pleasure indeed in supporting the resolution.

Mr. SUTHERLAND said he would have no objection to the amendment of the Colonial Secretary if he thought there was any probability of a bill being passed this year to assist the city of Sydney. The resolutions, however, were not his now; they were the property of the committee. He was sorry that so much feeling had been imported into the discussion, and for which the hon. member for East Sydney (Mr. Stuart) was mainly responsible. As to the largeness of the amount, which that hon. member dwelt on, he had learned from the Town Clerk that the revenue of the city, instead of being what the hon. member estimated, was £44,000. He could not accede to the amendment, but he was willing to postpone the resolutions until after the bill had been introduced if the Government would allow it to be taken on a Government night.

Mr. DIBBS hoped the Government would not give up a Government night for this resolution. He intended to vote against both the resolution and the amendment, because he thought it was an extremely bad principle to allow hon. members to interfere with the finances by means of motions of this kind. He thought such inroads upon Governments should be resisted to the death. He warned the House against this practice, which had now become common, and the example for which was set by the late Government. The Government were following the bad example of their predecessors in yielding to a demand for a large expenditure of money that must disturb the financial arrangements of the country. Here they were at the end of a session, after the budget had been delivered, asked to vote an amount almost equal to the amount derivable in one year from the stamp duties. [Mr. JACOB: The Government consented.] He did not care. He condemned hon. members coming down and usurping the functions of the Government. No hon. member could justify the proposal to vote £122,000 at the tail-end of a session, to put the Government into a bill passing into law which would give the municipalities power to borrow large sums of money direct from the Government. The proposal to give such grants as these to the municipalities was most unreasonable, and he should vote against both the motion and the amendment.

Mr. WISDOM said if the Government were opposed to this proposition as a whole, why did they not vote against it; but he could not understand how they could make this grant to country municipalities, and refuse the same in justice to Sydney. All these country municipalities had since their foundation received an endowment from the Government, beginning with one half and getting less after a certain number of years, whereas Sydney had never received a single shilling of the Government endowment. In April, 1875, it was stated by a Minister in reply to a question that if the Corporation of Sydney had been paid rates for all the Government buildings in the city since its establishment, they would have received £183,110. And that amount they were entitled to receive from the Government for rates upon property which were kept up not for the City of Sydney, but for the colony generally. And that was irrespective of an endowment. If Sydney had received a sum by way of endowment, such as had been received by the country municipalities what an amount would that have been! But they were told that Sydney had no right to endowment because the Corporation had had a loan or a gift of £40,000 or £50,000. But admitting that there had been a gift of that amount, what was that to be set against the £183,000, which the Corporation were entitled to for rates upon Government property, and the amount they would have received in addition to an endowment equal to what was given to the country municipalities? If the representatives of Sydney had seen that justice was done to it, instead of being in its present position it would have had an ample revenue. (Cheers. He had never acted from a narrow-minded policy with regard to Sydney. He had voted for every expenditure for Sydney that he thought was fair, and in justice to the various Governments he must say that he had scarcely known a vote proposed that was not a fair vote. Did they find this narrow-minded policy pursued with regard to country expenditure by city representatives? Certainly not. They found city members in the Supreme Court in justice to the claims of country. And yet they had country members setting up their backs and refusing to do justice to Sydney. The Colonial Secretary did not attempt during the last session to let the House know what they were put out by the scruff of the neck. What had been done during the night? They had not been attending in their places, but they had been passing away money. Country hon. members—he did not know with what effect—trying to induce one to go away to his farm, and another to his merchandise; and they knew that if the Government were beaten, there would be either a dissolution or resignation—as if hon. members were afraid of that. He was not afraid of dissolution, for if he never came back, he should not regret it so long as he left behind him the knowledge that as long as Tory on that side of the House had not fear a dissolution; they had not voted against going to the country. Let the gilded lads beautify themselves and swagger in the lobby as they had done now. The hon. member for Morpeth entirely forgot the position which he and we occupied, when he charged us with get no into a state of excitement and trembling by the hon. gentleman opposite—the facts were that he was the only Minister who spoke, and he then only uttered a few dispassionate words to the committee. There had not been a single passage that indicated any feeling at all, or that he did wish to say anything except to the committee the position in which we found ourselves. That showed how the hon. gentleman's understanding was completely clouded by the feelings into which he had worked himself when he saw an opportunity of embarrassing the Government. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) He could not help taking notice of the hon. gentleman, although it was painful to do so, after his most personal assertions—not personal exactly because of his being an aspirant for a high judicial office. (Expressions of dissent from Mr. Burns.) He was not surprised that the hon. gentleman did not accept office as the colleague of the late Postmaster-General. (Loud dissent and cheers.) He was alluding to the fact that the hon. gentleman was an aspirant for the Speaker's chair, and they naturally kept their eyes upon him. What was right, should be the supporting of his own Government, which was their business, and of his own industries. The hon. member had not failed to seize every opportunity to cause confusion to the person who had had the presumption to step into the positions he and his colleagues had occupied for the last five years. He made it a personal charge that the Treasurer was not in his place to-night, and the hon. member forgot that the late Government, which he supported, knew the value of the services of Mr. Garrett, and were incapable of governing the country. (Cheers.) Time after time motions had been brought in by private members interfering with the finances through East and West Maitland, and on through Singleton, Muswellbrook, Jerry's Plains, and Armidale, and onwards, every inch of which was made and kept up by the Government. At Dumbiquin there was a toll tax from which thousands of pounds were got in, spent on the four miles each side of that structure. At Penrith, also, the tolls were expended on the road, east and west of the bridge there. As to the regard of Sydney—it was Nothing of the kind. The Government, as soon as the great southern Road came to it, did not expend a penny on it. George-street required £11,000 a year to keep it in repair, and they also knew that the great products of the north passed along many of the streets of the city—especially Russell-street—to the Circular Quay, at which the Government had not contributed a shilling. Then, again, take the Paterson district—that was not incorporated—there was a bridge there, representing an expenditure equal to £4 or £5 per head of the population; while at Williams River there was a bridge representing an expenditure equal to £3 per head. (No, no.) [Mr. WISDOM: That's a d—r wonder. (Laughter.)] The Bathurst bridge, on the Great Western Road, was different. Too Government, in his opinion, or any Legislature, would do no good in the matter until they discarded municipal duties and gave the municipalities themselves power to levy rates for roads. To the present House was not a Parliament at all, as was simply a convention, and, and as famous for squabbling as any other council in the colony. It certainly had done nothing in the shape of legislation during the last three years, since it was called to municipal matters it ought to have nothing to do with. The hon. member ought to have proper laws allowing different localities to perform local duties, and to be supported by the fact that members voting money away had no personal knowledge of what it was intended for. When it was seen that money was voted away like that, it created a desire on the part of every member to have their districts benefited, and that the House was taken up with municipal matters altogether. Sydney was unable to look to the Government for assistance in regard to water supply and sewerage. (Attention was called to the state of the House, and a quorum formed.) He was surprised that the Government did not remain in the House. He certainly did not try to make a party question. He only wished that justice should be done to Sydney, and the other municipalities. He thought the municipalities deserved to have the money dealt out to them as proposed, for they had proved themselves quite able to discharge their duties properly—that was, of course, as far as their funds allowed. No municipal council could carry on their duties in a satisfactory manner unless they were allowed to levy a rate for the purpose. He had visited many of them and found such to be the case; there was an actual necessity for the money mentioned in the resolutions being voted, and it was simply as a matter of necessity that he would vote for it. Take Sydney, for instance. Did any municipality in the country require more than the city of Sydney? It was asked to visit it with any degree of confidence—as they could be invited to Melbourne—for its thoroughfares, especially the minor ones, that gave a character to the city—were in a very bad state of repair for the want of funds to procure metal to repair them. They had, however, no power to raise money for the purpose, and the consequence was that the back streets had become a perfect disgrace to any city. Such a state of things ought to disappear he knew, but, notwithstanding the economical course pursued by the City Council, they still existed. The Council, besides, had no place for the deposit of accumulated matter, which went down to the sea. How could they keep up their heads when the rulers of the country would not give them their proper power. They only wanted justice, and even that was denied them. He believed the House generally would give it them, but he feared the Premier would be deterred from doing so notwithstanding the desires of his heart otherwise—as he was deterred sixteen years ago, when he wished to place Sydney in a most enviable position. The Municipal Bill only consolidated the present Acts; the nature of the endowment clauses was a secret. He did not think that they should be known to any one until the bill was brought to the table of this House. But the bill would require to be one of 200 or 300 clauses, and the Parliament along municipal duties there was no expectation that a bill would be passed. Now then was their time to place the city upon the same footing as the other municipalities. [Attention was called to the state of the committee, and a quorum was formed.]

He would trust the Government with justice, and he hoped they would do justice to the city of Sydney. Every opportunity had been taken to disparage the metropolis, while the interior of the country had been benefited. The Corporation of Sydney was started on a basis found to be perfectly inadequate. The fifty-eighth half-yearly report of the Commercial Bank, adopted at the meeting held to-day, closely resembles the preceding one in its main features, such as the immense profits made, the large dividend, and the amount added to reserve. The half-year's account opened with an undivided balance of £10,123 15s. 1d., which, added to £88,633 19s. 5d. net profits for the past six months, left £98,757 14s. 6d. available for distribution, which was appropriated in the following manner—to dividend, at the rate of 25 per cent. per annum, £62,500; to reserve fund, £25,000; to new account, £11,257 14s. 6d. The reserve fund now stands at £425,000. Mr. F. H. Dangar was re-elected a director. Messrs. J. R. Street and E. M. Stephen were elected auditors.

At the half-yearly meeting of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company, held yesterday, a bonus of 20 per cent. was shared between the shareholders and the policy-holders, and £5098 5s. added to the reserve fund.

We understand that some time ago Captain Eldred, on behalf the Netherlands-India Company, made the Government of this colony an offer for conveying despatches between Port Darwin and Java. This was done recently by Mr. Von Amstel to the Government of Victoria.

A decrease in the number of sales was noticeable in the Stock and Share market this week. The aggregate was less than that of any similar period for some time past, and had it not been for the partial revival of the Hill End companies there would have been a very meagre list of transactions. Bank stock firm. City sold at 9¾ c. d. of 4 per cent. declared on Tuesday, and are firm at 9½ x. d. Commercial sold at 100 early in the week, and, after declaration of a 12½ per cent. dividend to-day, were not offered below 99. Joint Stock not dealt in, sellers at 14½. The expected arrival of the English mail, and the difficulty of obtaining carriage for goods required for the interior, helped to intensify the dull tone of the Import markets during the last few days. The week opened with an entire absence of demand, and although there have since been a few trade orders coming to hand, they have not been sufficiently large to give an improving tone to business. The breadstuffs market has been firm at £18 10s. to £19 10s. for Adelaide flour, £17 10s. to £19 for Sydney mills, and £15 to £17 for country lots of inferior quality. The mail brings news of a shipment of 250 tons wheat being made from Calcutta to Melbourne. This is quite a new source of supply as far as the colonies are concerned, and one from which Adelaide speculators, who are controlling the markets, could hardly have anticipated any danger. The R. M. S. City of New York brings 200 tons Californian flour for Sydney. The only lot there was of that quality in first hands here has been placed to a local miller on private terms. There have been no transactions in building materials. Caudles- are dull at 10d. for Goudas, 10½d. for five-medal. Coffee has a limited sale at late rates. In Dundee goods there has been a slight upward tendency. Woolpacks firm, at 3s. 6d. for parcels. Cornsacks are also better held. Drugs and chemicals move slowly, at former quotations. A speculative movement in 1-lb. salmon having cleared the market of a quantity of new catch, prices have hardened, and 8s. 9d. is asked for parcels. Other descriptions of fish have a slow sale ; dried ling and herrings only in moderate supply. Fruits are without improvement, and stocks increasing. No alterations have taken place in groceries and oilmen's store ; holders experience some difficulty in realizing at present. There has been a little more doing in bulk ale, as well as inquiry for brandies, but no business worth mentioning was done in the latter, buyers expecting an easier market. Hennessy's bulk held for 8s. 9d., case at 8ls. 3d. Good second brands are going into consumption in small lines, and we also heard of the quittance of a parcel of Otard's on terms withheld. Rum is easier, best 80 o.p. not worth over 4s. Sales of geneva at 10s. to 11s. 9d., for small to medium contents. No transactions in metals except at low prices, which hardly furnish any indication of the market value. Linseed oil is recovering the effect of forced sales ; 4s. paid for a parcel of boiled and raw. Kerosene nominal. Sugars are scarcely so firm. The balance of a cargo of Mauritius was offered by auction on Wednesday, and only a few tons were sold. There have been further transactions in new teas by private contract at about auction rates. Public sales of hides and tallow held to-day passed off without animation. The tanners bought sparingly, and out of over 6000 hides offered only about one half changed hands, though a slight decline was submitted to : Medium to heavy sold at 4d. to 4¼d. ; light and dry, 3½d. to 4¾d. ; inferior, 2½d. to 3¾d. ; calfskins, 1s. 0d. to 3s. 1d. ; yearlings, 3s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. Kangaroo skins, plentiful and lower ; small sold as low as 5d., best up to 1s. 9d. Horse hides, 8s. 6d. to 9s. 3d. Shipping parcels of tallow met no inquiry, and were bought in ; trade lots dull and prices hardly so firm ; mutton realised £36 to £36 15s. ; medium to prime beef, £33 to £35 ; inferior and mixed, £25 to £33 10s. Horns, 20s. to 26s. 6d. ; shankbones, £5 15s. to £11. Beeswax, 12½d. to 13d. The sales were as follows :—

By Messrs. PRODUCE CIRCULARS.

MORT AND CO.—Wool : No sales having been held this week, there is nothing to report. The arrivals continue to be very limited, and all available finds ready sale at very satisfactory prices. Quotations are unaltered. Sheepskins are in active request, the small supply of greasy wool including good occupiers among the local scourers and fellmongers. Latest quotations may be given as follows :—Medium to full-fleeced, 5d to 7d ; short-grown and faulty, 3½d to 4½ ; and pelts, 1½d to 3d per lb. Horsehides : All descriptions are scarce, and large sizes are urgently competed for ; from 7s to 8s 6d ; small to medium, 4s to 5s per hide. Shankbones are saleable at from 5s to £11 per ton ; a great deal, however, depends on the condition. Horns meet with ready competition at from 20s to 30s per 100 for medium large, and 15s to 18s for small and inferior. Kangaroo Skins : The supply this week was beyond requirements, and to make sales, lower prices had to be submitted to. Quotations :—Medium to large, 18s to 20s per dozen ; small, 10s to 14s. Wallaby skins, 3s to 5s per dozen. Hair : Good tail is scarce, but without improvement in price. Quotations—Tail, 13d to 13½d ; mixed, 10d to 11d ; and mane, 9d to 10d per lb.—July 20.

J. BARNES.—Fat cattle on Monday were in fair supply, but prices were rather higher, as supplies were expected to run short owing to excessive rains, &c., but on Thursday a decided improvement was quite evident, medium and fair pens going freely at 20s to 27s per 100 lbs., and it is now pretty certain that low prices will not be seen again for some time. Fat sheep on Monday were very scarce, only two lots offered—one fair and one inferior—and they were held for high prices ; and on Tuesday the supply was poor in numbers and quality, and prices, say, 10s 6d to 12s 6d for, say, 40 to 50 lbs. lots. Calves were very scarce this week. Lambs, too, were dear, say, 10s to 14s. Pigs, 4d to 6d alive.—July 20.

STOCK AND STATION REPORTS.

G. M. PITT AND SON.—Stations : We have not heard of any transactions having taken place during the week. Fat Cattle : 1250 yarded. There has been a marked improvement in this market during the week. On Monday there was a large attendance of buyers, and biddings were animated, at a considerable advance on the previous week's prices, and again on Thursday there was a still further advance of 10s a head. We quote :—60-lb. wethers, worth 17s 6d ; 55-lb. ditto, 15s ; 50-lb. ditto, 14s. Our sales have been 1600 wethers, at 14s 6d ; 1000 at quotations. Store Sheep : We have heard of several sales during the week ; we have three very superior lots of 10,000 wethers, now in the Gwydir district, for sale. Good 6 and 8-tooth wethers are worth in Sydney 20s.

BARNES, WOLFE, AND SADLEIR.—Stations : We have heard of no transactions being concluded this week, but as we have several properties under inspection, we will probably report business done in our next. Fat Cattle : The market opened on Monday with a fair supply and a marked improvement in prices, which was well maintained to close of sales and improved upon on Thursday, when only a smaller number were yarded. We are fairly in the rise now, and anticipate higher prices than for some weeks before spring cattle arrive. Our sales have been to bullocks (Neely's), at £7 15s 9d. Fat Lambs and Calves : Lambs have been plentiful, and have not improved in price, but calves are scarce and dear.—July 20.

MALDEN, HILL, AND CLARK.—Fat Cattle : 161 came forward at Homebush for Monday's sales, consisting chiefly of fair quality. There was a good attendance of the trade, and sales passed off well, the market closing firm. On Tuesday 190 head were yarded, which met with a ready sale at an advance of from 1s to 20s per head on last week's rates, which price we expect will be maintained for some time to come, and we look for enhanced prices, as the supply of fat cattle on the road is now almost nil. We quote best pens worth 20s per 100 lbs., medium 23s. Fat Sheep : 6130 were penned at Homebush during the past week. In addition to these, the carcase trades have large outside purchases and supplies are arriving by steamer every day. All forward at Homebush last with a ready sale, and the market is decidedly firmer, especially for good quality ; best wethers, 45 lbs., are worth 15s. Frost and Co., 2000 wethers at 9s 6d ; and on account of a Chinaman, has been released on bail. Store Stock : We have this week placed under offer about 20,000 store sheep and hope to have some sales to report in our next, although business is rather dull, owners holding over until after shearing. We have also negotiations pending for the sale of two large properties in this district, and hope to have some sales to report in our next.—July 20.

Full particulars have not yet been received, but the Meikong sank so quickly—the mails not having been saved—that it is supposed she must have struck, with full steam on, at night, owing probably to foggy monsoonish weather. The crew and passengers were all saved, and arrived at Aden in the boats. On the 20th the passengers were taken on thence by the P. and O. steamer a few days later.

This is the first steamer the French Company has lost in the East, save one in China. The Meikong was going home to be refitted, and the captain and officers were looking forward to their holiday. The Meikong was 3000 tons and 500 horse-power.

The constable's evidence was therefore taken; and prisoner, being convicted, was sentenced to pay for this offence a penalty of 40s., or to be imprisoned two months. CORONER'S INQUEST.

SUSPICIOUS DEATH IN THE DOMAIN.—The inquest touching the death of the man Henry Jones, who was found dead in the Domain on Monday last, was resumed at the Coroner's Office, yesterday morning. The following evidence was given on Wednesday:—

Constable Sproule deposed that he knew the deceased as a draper; had seen him knocking about for the last five or six weeks; deceased told him he was subject to fits.

Thomas Wareham, warehouseman, knew the deceased; last saw him two years ago; knew him to be a man of intemperate habits.

Finlay M'Kay, the Domain ranger, deposed that on Monday afternoon last a man who gave his name as John Baldwin and his residence as 45, Clarence-street, told him that there was a dead body lying near Mrs. Macquarie's Chair; on going to the place indicated, between Quig's baths and the point, he found the body of deceased lying on the rocks seven or eight yards beyond the high-water mark; his legs were in a three-bushel bag which was tied above his hips; the body was lying on its back, with the head overhanging the rock; there was a shelving rock above that on which the body was lying; after looking at the body, witness communicated with the police; deceased was known to witness for the last six months, as he had been sleeping in the Domain.

Constable Thomas Norton deposed that he found in the clothes of deceased a shilling, a card with the name J. H. James on it, and testimonials bearing the same name; also a book called "Jack Sheppard;" on a ledge of rock about four feet distant, there was a sheet of brown paper pressed down as if some one had lain upon it; there was also an old vest with some socks and rags in it.

Dr. Dansey deposed that he examined the body of the deceased; there was a small cut on the left ear from which blood was exuding; there were also three abrasions on the left temple, and post-mortem abrasions of the skin on the nose and hands; the tongue was clenched between the teeth; there was a small sore with sticking plaster on it on the left instep, and his left foot had been broken some time since; the right foot was twisted inwardly; in making a post mortem examination of the body he found a quantity of extravasated blood beneath the scalp on the parietal bone, the result of violence to the head, either by a fall or blows; the bloodvessels of the membranes of the head were enormously congested; the brain substance was healthy; there was no fracture of the skull or effusion of blood on the brain; the left lung was adhering to the chest from pleurisy; the right lung was healthy; the heart was of normal size, the left cavities being empty and the right full of blood; in his opinion the cause of death was congestion of the brain; the extravasation of blood beneath the scalp took place during life, and was the result of violence, but whether that violence was the exciting cause of the congestion of the brain he could not say.

At this stage the inquiry was adjourned.

The following evidence was given to-day:—

Frederick James, an accountant, residing at Woollahra, deposed that the deceased was his brother, a native of Surrey, England, and about 33 years of age; he was a draper, and had been in the colony about 16 years; he was subject to fits from infancy.

John Boylan, labourer, living in Clarence-street, deposed that, on Sunday afternoon last, about 1 o'clock, he saw the body of the deceased lying under the rocks between Quirk's baths and Mrs. Macquarie's Chair; it was lying on its back; he went close to the body and saw that it was dead; he did not inform any constable of his discovery, but he told a boy that he met in Woolloomooloo Bay; on Monday morning, between 8 and 9 o'clock, he went to the place to see if the body was still there, and found that it was, and in the same position; he did not then communicate his discovery to any one; he went back to the place between 12 and 1 o'clock the same day, and found the body still in the place where he first saw it; he then went to the Domain ranger and informed him of the discovery, and described to him the place where the body was; he did not tell the ranger that he found the body on Sunday afternoon, and that he saw it there again on Monday morning; knew the deceased by sight, and had spoken to him; was aware that deceased was in the habit of sleeping in the Domain, and getting his meals at the Soup Kitchen; never had any quarrel with him; during the last fortnight he (witness) had not been doing anything; he had money besides what he earned a week ago; did not recollect seeing any blood about the place; he last saw the deceased alive either this day week or yesterday week, in the morning, in the Domain, at the place where the body was found; it was on Friday morning, about 9 o'clock, when he saw the deceased at the rocks; he was certain that that was the last time he saw the deceased alive; could not swear whether he was at the rocks on Saturday morning or not; his recollection was very bad; could not say whether he went there on Saturday afternoon or not; did not remember where he got his meals on Saturday; it was not later than 9 o'clock when he got home on Saturday night; could not say whether he strayed into the Domain or not on Saturday evening; he was walking about the town; it was raining on Sunday when he went round the Domain, and also on Monday; he frequently took walks in the rain, which he did not mind much; he gave the ranger a wrong address; he did not then know the right one.

This witness was subjected to a very severe cross-examination by the Coroner and jury, and at the conclusion of his evidence the Coroner informed him that what he had stated gave rise to suspicion against him, and that it would, consequently, be necessary to adjourn the inquest, in order that the police might make further inquiries.

The inquest was accordingly adjourned until Monday, the 30th instant.

WRECK OF THE YARRA YARRA.

INQUEST ON THE BODY OF THE LATE CHIEF OFFICER.

[FROM OUR NEWCASTLE CORRESPONDENT.]

This inquiry was resumed at 10 o'clock on Thursday at the Council Chambers.

Dr. Richard Harris deposed: I examined the body of the deceased, lying at the dead-house on Monday morning, and am of opinion that he came to his death by drowning.

Herbert Cross deposed: I am the local manager of the Newcastle Wallsend Coal Company; I knew the Yarra steamer; our company supplied the cargo of coal with which she left Newcastle on her last voyage; I supplied 500 tons; I believe she had no other coal from any other company; there was some coal in her bunkers over this amount; 20 tons out of the 500 was put into her bunkers for consumption on the voyage; I cannot say how much coal was in her bunkers before the 20 tons were put in; I do not know how much she was entitled to carry, she usually carried about 560 tons, and was generally loaded by our company.

F. Wetherill deposed: I am secretary to the Marine Board, and honorary secretary of the Lifeboat Committee; I produce the minute-book of the Lifeboat Committee; that committee has charge of the lifeboat; in the book I produce there is a code of regulations for the management of the boat; these regulations have been made and adopted by the committee; I find by the minute-book, under date of January 19, 1871, it was resolved that the lifeboat crew should be summoned at the firing of a gun from the signal hill, and the boat launched on the firing of a second gun; I do not know of any regulation adopted by the committee directing or instructing the signal-man as to the firing of the gun, except the notice published; I am only speaking of the period since I took office in 1871; I have been connected with the lifeboat service since its first establishment; I have never received any salary for the office of secretary; numberless instances are recorded of the difficulty of obtaining crews.

By the Foreman: I heard for the first time, last night, that the crew were dissatisfied at not being summoned early enough; I find by the minute book of 1st September, 1876, that the cause of the coxswain, Ahern Hicker, leaving the service was, as stated by himself to the committee, on account of the difficulty of getting a crew in every instance, and the trouble experienced in getting the boat off the cradle, through the ways being sanded up; I perceive by the minutes of the book under date 28th May, 1877, that it was decided that when the lifeboat was wanted for active service, Captain Allan as president, should take his station on the hill and give the order for the second gun to be fired for the launching of the lifeboat; and in the event of his absence, Captain Close will take his place on the hill, and any one of the members being at the shed shall see the orders carried out—the boat manned and launched when the second gun is fired: I cannot say of my own knowledge that the signal-man was made acquainted with the resolution; so far as I am aware, the crews have always been paid under the arrangement; one great difficulty in the effectual carrying out of the service has been inability to muster the crew, substitutes being sent; a full crew has not been out for practice services during the last three months; I sincerely believe the Lifeboat Committee have done all in their power to make the lifeboat service effective; the lifeboat service would be more effective if quarters were provided for the crew, so that they could be available at a moment's notice: on referring to the committee's letter-book, under date 18th June, 1869, I find a letter from the Lifeboat Committee to the Government, suggesting that dwellings for the lifeboat crew should be erected near the station: I am not aware that any answer was received to that letter; such a provision ought to increase the efficiency of the lifeboat service: if the crew were in readiness on the approach of a gale the efficiency of the service would be materially enhanced.

By the jury: The lookout-man would be held blameless by the committee if he fired the second gun, if there was no one there to give him orders; no man has ever been censured by the Lifeboat Committee for so doing.

Joseph Minter deposed: I was a boatman in the Newcastle Harbour department, and live in Newcastle; I occasionally do duty as assistant lookout-man on Signal Hill; I was doing that duty on Sunday last from five minutes to 6 a.m. to 7 p.m.; it was not clear daylight when I went on duty on Sunday morning; about half-past 6 o'clock on Sunday morning I saw a vessel in the direction of the bell buoy, which I could not make out at the time, in consequence of a heavy squall; as soon as the squall cleared off, which was in about five minutes, I made her out to be a steamer; my mate, William "Sparkes, then hoisted the steamer's signal flag "Close to;" whilst Sparkes was doing this, I noticed smoke coming from her funnel; I then saw the steamer heading to the north-west; she had rounded Nobby's before I saw her again: her head was then about mid-channel, steering for the leading lights; she next hauled away towards the eastward: shortly afterwards she drew up towards Nobby's, and shipped three seas; the first sea caught her abaft the mainsail; the next one caught her midships, going right over the paddle-boxes; the next caught her on the bow, and canted her head to the north-west; after that, she seemed to be sagging towards the beach, making no headway, until she went down; this was in a little over half-an-hour from the time I first discerned her; she had something, that I supposed to be a flag, flying from her main peak; she had no lights, so far as I could see; the man Burgess, whom I relieved, reported "nothing in sight;" when I went in the look-out on Sunday morning I could not see a ship's light more than half a mile distant; Sparkes and I thought that the Yarra was the Sydney boat when we first saw her; we did not recognise her as being the Yarra Yarra until she was on the bar; I am a seafaring man, with thirty years' experience, and hold a certificate as master mariner; when she was on the bar I did not consider her to be in danger; it is my opinion that any ordinary coasting steamer, not overloaded, would have entered the port safely.

By the Mayor: The gun was fired just before she got on the bar; I was not at the gun when it was fired; it was fired and the second gun loaded before the three seas mentioned by me struck her; I did not think that she was in danger; after she had lost her way, having been struck by the three seas mentioned, I heard pilot Dagwell say to Sparkes, "Hold on, until I go down;" this was immediately after the second gun was loaded: Dagwell immediately went running down the hill; I did not see M'Gregor this morning until after the gun was fired: about from seven to ten minutes elapsed from the time the second gun was loaded until I saw that the steamer was in danger: Mr. Dagwell had gone before this; Sparkes and I had no conversation about firing the gun after I saw that the ship was in danger: Sparkes was standing by the gun with the trigger line in his hand, looking down towards the lifeboat shed: had been in charge of the gun, and not been told to "hold on," I would have felt myself justified in firing the second gun without any orders: I have seen a heavier sea on the bar, but I have never seen the sea break so heavily close to Nobby's as it did on Sunday morning, and that increased the danger; it was dangerous for the lifeboat to go where the Yarra foundered.

At this stage the inquest was postponed until Thursday next, the coroner having other inquests to hold.

This Company is projected for the purpose of purchasing and thereafter carrying on Messrs. Guthrie and Larnach's well-known Woodware Factories and their extensive importing timber and iron business.

An agreement has been entered into with Messrs. Guthrie and Larnach to sell to the Company their new factories, together with all their other buildings, with the entire machinery, plant, and stock of every description at the actual net cost; the whole of the freehold and leasehold land held by the firm at present market value; and their usual fleet of coasting vessels also at present actual value, the new Company taking over all current agreements and uncompleted orders or contracts. (For the purpose of these and all other valuations the gentlemen respectively named hereafter have been appointed by mutual agreement between Messrs. Guthrie and Larnach and the Provisional Directors.) It has also been arranged that the new Company shall take over the entire debts due to the firm secured and unsecured at par, but shall be entitled to receive on all unsecured debts interest at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum from the day when stock is taken up to the date of actual payment, and in addition a commission for collecting of two and a half percent., Messrs. Guthrie and Larnach guarantee the entire amount of the unsecured debts to the Company.

Mr. Guthrie has consented to be fully identified with the business for a number of years as managing director. Mr. Guthrie's practical skill and long experience in the trade are well known; the high position to which the firm has attained under his management indicates the measure of prosperity which may reasonably be expected in the future; and as a proof of Mr. Guthrie and his partner's faith in the future prospects of the concern, they are willing to hold one-fifth each, or equal to two-fifths of the entire capital on their own private account, purchased in fully paid-up shares. And as a further proof of their confidence in the future prospects of the Company, they have decided to guarantee that the Company's net profits for the first three years shall not be less than 10 per cent. per annum on the actual capital for the time being employed in the business, or equal to a sum of about £57,000 to be paid to the shareholders within three years. They expect and believe that the profits will considerably exceed this rate, but investors will by this means know the rate of their minimum profits. By way of further securing the observance of the guarantee the firm have agreed to deposit with the Directors of the Company a trip of the Company during the first year of the value of £50,000, during the second year of £40,000, and during the third year of £25,000, and to execute a legal charge upon the same in favour of the Company.

Intending shareholders may, therefore, rest assured that no more legitimate or remunerative outlet for capital, or one presenting better or more extensive future prospects, has ever been offered to the public in the Australasian colonies.

The reasons which have induced Messrs. Guthrie and Larnach to take this step are:—

1st. That their term of partnership expires by effluxion of time in the course of a few months, when it is the intention of one of the partners to retire from active business.

2nd. That the plant, machinery, and general appliances of the firm are now of a character which opens up a largely extended and extremely profitable trade, which, however, calls for the employment of an extended capital.

The valuation of the freehold and leasehold lands, with full particulars as to amount of capital employed and net profits realised during the last four and a half years, taken from the firm's books, and certified by Messrs. A. W. Morris, C. H. Street, and Edmund Smith, valuators and auditors, together with a copy of the agreement entered into with the firm by the Provisional Directors, may be obtained by bona-fide intending investors from the brokers.

Forms of application for shares can be obtained at the offices of Messrs. Guthrie and Larnach, or of Messrs. Connell and Moodie, or J. B. Bradshaw, brokers, Dunedin; and from Messrs. J. B. Were and Son, Collins-street, Melbourne; Messrs. A. G. Smith and Co., Sydney; and Frederick Wright, Esq., Adelaide.

Full prospectus, with forms of application, to be obtained from the Brokers, Messrs. J. B. WERE and SON, 80, Collins-street West, Melbourne.

The share list will close in Melbourne on MONDAY, the 23rd July, at 4 p.m., and in making the allotment, the Provisional Directors will consider the order in which applications have been made.

TORRENS' TITLE.

HARDIE and GORMAN,
Auctioneers.

TUESDAY, August 14.

TO SPECULATORS, TIN MINERS, and others.
POSITIVE UNRESERVED SALE of the whole of the
RIALTO TIN MINE and PLANT, situate on the
SEVERN RIVER, NEAR STANTHORPE, QUEENSLAND, and consisting of
320 ACRES of FREEHOLD land, said to contain large quantities of
THE RICHEST RUBY TIN ORE.
This property commands a frontage on both sides of the SEVERN RIVER, and is within a short distance of the township of STANTHORPE.

THE GOVERNMENT ROAD
also passes through the land direct to WARWICK.
TERMS, CASH.

HARDIE and GORMAN have received instructions from the Official Liquidator of the RIALTO TIN MINING CO. (Limited) to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Bell's-chambers, 375, Pitt-street, Sydney, on TUESDAY, 14th August,
The whole of the COMPANY'S LAND, PLANT, &c., &c.

☞ The Auctioneers desire to call the special attention of SPECULATORS and TIN-MINERS to this bona-fide and positive sale. It is believed that large quantities of tin lie in this land, abounding in TIN ORE, yet remain to be developed, and which, no doubt, will yield a very HANDSOME RETURN.
The QUALITY of the TIN ORE from this property is a very RICH RUBY, assaying nearly always 75 per cent.
There is always a large supply of WATER from the SEVERN RIVER, which runs through the land, and which receives the DRIFT and ALLUVIUM of the following watercourses, viz.:—
QUART-POT CREEK
SUGARLOAF CREEK
THIRTEEN-MILE CREEK
FOUR-MILE CREEK and
KETTLE SWAMP.
The course of the river is intersected with rocky bars of granite, thus forming a succession of WATERHOLES, varying much in extent and depth, but all supposed to contain large deposits of ALLUVIAL TIN.

This ENTIRE PROPERTY is close to the well-known and very remunerative land known as
which is returning a very large yield of
per fortnight.
It cannot be denied that, judiciously worked, this property will prove a very remunerative speculation; and the Auctioneers have every confidence in recommending the same to the notice of persons WILLING and COMPETENT to carry out the works.
The advantages are many and varied, and seldom can be offered at the same time.

Further information can be obtained at the SALE ROOMS of the AUCTIONEERS; or from Mr. BENJAMIN HARDAKER, Stanthorpe.

ELEGANT MODELS and CHOICE WOODS with
OTHER ADVANTAGES.

Our varied stock, by well-known MAKERS, is specially adapted for the colony, as, while having the highest class MECHANISM with brilliant TONE and an elastic TOUCH, they possess two other great essentials—STRENGTH and PORTABILITY.
These well-known importations have been tested in the most trying portions of the AUSTRALIAN COLONIES, and after years of wear always realize a fair price, whether sold or taken in exchange.

THE MASSIVE GERMAN PIANOS
are also represented in our stock, by makers of repute, viz.—

SCHWECHTEN, LIPP, and HOLLING.

NOTE.—IRON is largely introduced in the German Pianos, and they are well adapted for CONCERT HALLS and large rooms, as they produce a great VOLUME of SOUND, and if in positions from which they would seldom be moved, their unusual weight and comparative imperishability would not be found inconvenient.

ELVY and CO.'S INSTALMENT SYSTEM is an equitable character, and has been extensively used for many years. INQUIRERS will find that E. and Co.'s terms are as liberal as those of any other house in this city.

TO CASH PURCHASERS.
We can offer unusual inducements either for NEW or SECOND-HAND Instruments, our stock, present and arrive, being very heavy.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

TAINTED MEAT.
TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of 14th inst. is a report of proceedings at the Water Police Court, on the preceding day, where I was charged before Messrs. Scott and Charlton by Mr. Seymour, Inspector of Nuisances, for having on my premises, on the 9th instant, certain meat which was unfit for the food of man, and which was not kept entirely separate from other meat intended for such food, nor ticketed as being unfit for human food.

The report goes on to say that "Mr. Seymour deposed to having found mutton and beef as described, completely putrid and rotten, and hanging with other meat in the shop for sale, and further, that he found in a back room, in which were a water-closet, a salting-down table, &c., a sheep which had just been skinned, and was covered with ulcers, from two of which very disgusting matter was exuding, and found another sheep in the same room hanging up. The Bench ordered the defendant to pay a fine of £20 with costs, or in default three months' imprisonment."

For the sake of justice, Mr. Editor, I have to ask the great favour of your publishing the following explanation, which will go far to extenuate the very grave and damaging charges contained in the foregoing extracts from Mr. Seymour's evidence.

I beg first to state that in addition to my butcher's shop in George-street, where the objectionable meat was found, I occupy another butcher's shop in Sussex-street. The former is managed by my son, John Brierly, and the latter by myself, which I attend to every day of the week. On the day of the Inspector's visit to George-street, on which day my son left the shop about ten o'clock, to attend the sale of cattle at Homebush, from which he did not return till half-past three p.m., when the man who slaughters for me at the Glebe Island Abattoirs told my son of his having brought in the two dead sheep from Mr. Ellis's yard, and hung them up in the shed at the back of the shop; at which my son expressed his surprise and anger, as he was never authorized by either him or myself to do so. My son then instructed him to let them remain till the bone-man called in the evening. The two sheep in question were part of a lot purchased by me at Ellis's sale yard, and had been smothered in the pen and trampled on by other sheep, and Mr. Ellis's man instead on my slaughterman removing them at once; but he had no right to bring them to my premises, into which they should never have been taken had either myself or my son been there.

With regard to the meat in the shop described by Mr. Seymour as being completely putrid and rotten, and hanging with other meat for sale, the fact is that after my son had started for Homebush, the shopman in charge, discovering that some of the mutton was becoming tainted, removed it to the extreme end of the shop furthest from the street, leaving only the sound and salable meat hanging in the front. I would here observe that the practice pursued by the Sydney retail butchers respecting tainted meat is to separate it from the sound meat for sale, and have it removed some day by the bone man who goes round the shops collecting it, and who, in like manner, calls at the salesyards to remove any sheep or lambs that may have been smothered in the pens, which not unfrequently happens. And touching the sheep which Mr. Seymour stated was covered with ulcers exuding very disgusting matter, there was nothing more disgusting than a little blood trickling from the bruises received in the pen.

Immediately in rear of the shop is a room, 9 feet square, used by the shopmen for their meals and personal cleanliness, and beyond it is the shed where the sheep were found, in which is a closet, comfortably boarded round to a height of nearly eight feet, and having a cistern, agreeably to the Corporation regulations; but there is no horse kept in this shed, as deposed by Mr. Seymour, nor was there at the time of his visit, nor for some time previous, neither is it my intention to keep one there.

From Mr. Seymour's evidence, the public would naturally conclude that my George-street shop was a pestilential plague spot. However, I can prove, beyond even the keen senses of vision and smell of an Inspector of Nuisances, that, as an abundant supply of water is on the premises, for which I pay the usual corporate charges, it is every day freely used in cleansing the shop and shed, and that the whole premises are kept in as cleanly a condition as pure water and the nature of a butchering business will warrant.

In conclusion, I desire to state that I hold a testimonial from Messrs. A. Hordern and Sons, that for the past twelve months I had supplied them with from fifty to eighty pounds of meat daily, and that during that time they had not had any bad meat tendered to them.

I further hold testimonials from a number of my respectable neighbours, as to the superior quality of the meat I had supplied them with for the past three years.

WILLIAM BRIERLY.
